OLD TIME FLYCATCHING.

Primitive Method of Getting Rid of the Troublesome Pests.

Newton M. Wilson, living one mile east of town, says a Scottsburg (Ind.) communication, has hanging in his barn an interesting keepsake in the shape of a flycatcher. It is not so curious in itself as it is in showing the primitive methods resorted to by the farmers in early days to rid themselves of flies. It is simply two smooth walnut boards, perhaps 80 by 12 inches, beveled at one end and fastened together by two whang cords strung through matched holes.

In the antebellum days people never thought of keeping flies out of the house; the problem was to dispose of them as they swarmed through the rooms, making life miserable generally. In fact, the use of netting to prevent their ingress is of comparatively recent origin, the invention of this much needed article dating back only 15 or 20 years.

As everybody knows, flies are exceptionally thick in farmhouses, even where screens are used, and when they are not they are almost intolerable. In the olden days the method most commonly employed in the country to destroy the troublesome fly was the use of such instruments as the one described above. The boards were beveled and hung in such manner that by their weight they separated at the bottom, and thus hung in an inverted V shape. To attract the flies they were smeared with molasses on the inner surface.

Thus prepared, they were suspended in convenient places about the house—in kitchen, hallway, porch, which generally served as the summer dining place, and especially in passageways. It was a common duty of every member of the household when passing one of those catches to clap the boards together, thus mashing the flies which had collected thereon. The cook clapped them in the kitchen, the hands as they passed to and from the house at meal-times did likewise, the whole household clapped them together hundreds of times a day, and thousands of pestiferous flies met their doom.—St. Louis Republic.

TIP MARKS ON TRUNKS.

The Luggage Signals Used by Hotel Employees Abroad.

Travelers whom every day brings back from the continent say that this season, more than ever, gives plentiful example of the Freemasonry which exists among continental hotel employees. Usually on board the boats from Calais, Boulogne and Ostend notes are compared by tourists who have covered the same ground and followed the same itinerary. The results are significant of "eye opening." Some such colloquy as the following is often overheard:

"My box and two portmanteaus were smashed fearfully by that villain of a porter at the Hotel des Bains, Villavilla, and my wife and I could get no attendance."

"That is curious, for we were treated by all the servants most beautifully. May I ask you a question? Did you tip the servants properly at the previous place, Hotel de Luxe, Lucerne?"

"No; I confess it was an oversight, but what has that to do with the Villavilla hotel?"

"Everything. Look at the hotel labels on your luggage. All on lower right hand corner. That implies that you are mean and illiberal. Now look at mine. All the labels in the upper left hand corner. That signifies liberality—treat this person well—encourage him—your politeness will be rewarded. My friend's bag here has a label stuck right in the middle, and that means, 'A good fellow—will tip, but very exacting—not easily pleased.'"

—London Mail.

Tired Locomotives.
Locomotives, like human beings, have their ailments, many of which defy the skill of those deputed to look after them, says the Toronto Mail. We hear of tired razors, a simple complaint which vanishes after a brief period of repose, but locomotives are apt to be in a bad disposition even after a day's rest and much oiling of the various parts.

Two good engines may be made on the most approved principle. They may each cost—as those of the London and Northwestern railway do—£2,200, and yet one will exhibit from the first a hardihood of constitution altogether wanting in its companion. A first class locomotive of 300 horsepower, costing £2,000, is expected to travel during its life 200,000 miles, or, say, 13,000 miles per annum for 15 years, yet now and then an engine is found so impervious to the assaults of time as to be able in its old age to do its daily work with all the zest and vigor of a youngster.

An Ancient Prayer.

Old John Ward, who was pilloried by Pope in the "Dunciad," and who actually stood in the pillory in the year 1727, when he was said to have been worth £200,000, was, nevertheless, a pious man. He had large estates in London and Essex and did not omit to pray for their welfare in the following manner: "O Lord, I beseech thee to preserve the two counties of Middlesex and Essex from fire and earthquake, and as I have a mortgage in Hertfordshire I beg of thee likewise to have an eye of compassion on that county, and for the rest of the counties deal with them as thou pleasest!"—Household Words.

Unworthy.

"That man Davis is clearly not fit to be a father."

"Why?"

"His child is a week and a half old, and he hasn't expressed the belief that it recognizes him."—Chicago News.

Glass bricks are made extensively in Germany. They are blown with a hollow center, containing rarefied air, and they are said to be as strong and durable as clay bricks. They freely admit light.

The measurements of death are a few inches of trivial disorders, multiplied by many feet of neglect. If a man or woman will take care of the little trivial disorders, there is no need to fear the big maladies, and long life and happiness will be the reward. The little disorders that cause the majority of big sicknesses, are the trivial derangements of the digestion that most people pay no heed to. Good digestion feeds and builds up a man; bad digestion starves him in every tissue, muscle, nerve-fiber, and brain-cell.

Bad digestion leads to consumption, blood and skin diseases, and nervous exhaustion and prostration. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery corrects all disorders of the digestion, invigorates the liver and prevents and cures consumption, blood and skin diseases, and nervous troubles. It is the great blood-maker, flesh-builder, and nerve tonic. Druggists sell it and have nothing else "just as good."

"I have lately given Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery a trial," writes Miss C. M. Malette, of Houston, Harris Co., Texas, "and it has completely cured me of very serious and obstinate disorders in which the heart's action was impaired. I took it for two weeks. I began to experience less discomfort from my illness, after about the fourth dose, and in four or five days still less, and several days after I was surprised to find that I was actually better. Two weeks having passed every symptom had disappeared."

"The man or woman who neglects constipation is storing up in the system a store of disorders that will culminate in some serious and possibly fatal malady. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are a safe, sure, speedy and permanent cure for constipation. One little 'Pellet' is a gentle laxative, and two a mild cathartic. They never gripe. Druggists sell them."

THE PRESIDENT AND THE CURRENCY QUESTION.

In his message to Congress the President dwells at considerable length on the currency question. He refers briefly to the mission of Senator Wolcott and his associates to Europe and does not like to admit that it was a failure. He tells us that the tariff question having been settled by the extra session of Congress the next pressing matter for consideration is that of the currency. He recites that on June 30, 1886, we had outstanding demand liabilities amounting to $725,883,487 41. January 1, 1879, these liabilities had been reduced to $443,889,495 88. The President does not explain how that reduction was accomplished and as some of the readers of the JOURNAL may not know, it may not be out of place to say that the demand liabilities of $725,883,487 41 were greenbacks then in circulation among the people and that the amount was reduced to $443,889,495 88 by issuing interest bearing bonds for the non-interest bearing greenbacks, and contracting the currency over $300,000,000.

The President also tells us that the interest-bearing obligations were reduced from $2,322,351,208 at the close of the war, to $847,865,620 on December 1, 1897, but he does not repeat what Teller and others asserted on the floor of the United States Senate at the last regular session of Congress, that it would take as much of our products at present prices to pay the public debt as it would have taken at the close of the war at the prices then prevailing, to redeem the debt, though the debt was over fifteen hundred millions of dollars more than than it is now. The decline in prices is due to the contraction of the currency and the demonetization of silver and, of course, the President avoided that subject.

The message says the Government money now outstanding consists of $348,681,016 in greenbacks, $107,793,280 in Treasury notes, issued by authority of the act of 1890, $381,983,504 of silver certificates, and $61,250,761 of standard dollars. This $900,000,000, the message says, "the Government by solemn enactment is pledged to keep at par with gold, nobody is obliged to redeem in gold but the Government."

Is the President correctly quoted, and if so does he state facts? Have we not been told by speakers and writers, who quote the law in support of their assertions, that every Government obligation, whether it be greenback, Treasury note or bond, is redeemable in coin, that is gold or silver, at the option of the Government? If they are right is not the President mistaken? Was not an attempt made by Congress at the time of the last bond issue to make the bonds redeemable in gold? If the President is right what occasioned the gold men to attempt to change the existing law when they wanted all obligations paid in gold?

The message refers to what Cleveland called the "endless chain" method of getting gold out of the Treasury by redeeming greenbacks and Treasury notes in gold every time they were issued, and he also recommends Cleveland's remedy that when gold is paid out for greenbacks the greenbacks should be kept in the Treasury, to be paid out for gold only. This and the recommendation of Secretary Clegg that national banks be permitted to issue notes to the full par value of the bonds which they have deposited with the Treasurer and that the tax on bank notes be reduced, is about the only remedy which he offers for the relief of the country from the stringency and depression caused by the contraction of the currency, and the closing of the mints to one of the metals which had been used as money since the time of Moses.

THE ASYLUM MANAGEMENT.

The papers have much to say about the management of the Asylum, or, as it is now called, Hospital for Mental Diseases. The minutes of a meeting of the Board of Commissioners held at a recent date was published at which one of the Commissioners asked for the resignation of the Superintendent. This motion did not prevail, but a motion requesting the Superintendent to inform the Board why he demitted a subordinate, was accepted.

A representative of the JOURNAL has asked each and all of the members of the Board of Commissioners for the care of the insane if any charges had been preferred against the Superintendent of the Hospital accusing him of misappropriation of the funds, cruelty to the patients, or mismanagement, and each and all of them replied in the negative. The members of the Board also state that they are ready at any time to investigate any charges of mismanagement that may be preferred against the Superintendent.

In justice to all concerned those who allege mismanagement or cruelty at the Hospital should inform the Board, that there may be a full, free and fair investigation. If the Superintendent is maligned or misrepresented he should have an opportunity to be heard before the Board and disprove the allegations. If the allegations are substantiated then the Board can act as it thinks proper.

There has scarcely been a year since the Asylum was occupied that there was not some scandal connected with it. The first Superintendent was dismissed for some reason which was never given to the public. His successor's management was investigated, at an expense of several thousand dollars to the State and the charges made against the Superintendent were not sustained. Now the papers are discussing the present management, but no charges have been preferred against the Superintendent.

Why does not some person who pretends to know of mismanagement, extravagance or wrong doing of any kind at the Hospital inform the Board of the fact? The people believe in fair play and everybody from an attendant to the Superintendent of a public institution, such as the Hospital, should be given an opportunity to face his accusers publicly.

In the Circuit Court at Stephens Point, Wisconsin, Mrs. Julia L. Green secured a verdict of $5,000 damages in a suit against the Ashland Water Company, the grounds for recovery being the negligence of the company in furnishing impure and unwholesome water containing typhoid fever germs, to the plaintiff's husband, from the effects of which he died. The case will be appealed.

The Boston Post says: A telegraph, extended wherever the postal routes go, with every postmaster in the small towns a telegraph operator and every post-office a telegraph station, would bring about an era of swift and easy communication that would broaden the life of the people and bind distant communities closer together. We ought to have it.

ON THE TRAIL OF A GHOST.

A Specimen of the Letters Sent to the London Times.

The following letter to the London Times tells a rather interesting experience and is a good illustration of the way Englishmen write to that paper about all sorts of topics:

To the Editor of The Times:

Sir—A curious parallel to your correspondent Mr. Wick's account of the ghost that haunted the house at Esher occurred some few years ago in an old Oxfordshire mansion, of which friends of my own had recently become possessed. Soon after the new owners moved into the house the servants' apartments and the children's nurseries, there was a chamber which had long been known as haunted and in which no one could ever be induced to sleep. By daylight it was a pleasant, sunny room, but to be in it at night, so every occupant declared, was enough to chill the very marrow in one's bones. No sooner was the moon all quiet, and windows shut and midnight near chiming from the church tower, than strange sounds, heard nowhere else, began to fill the haunted room. Weird music broke the silence, now sweet and soft and lovely as a dream, then swelling into wild confusion, then dying away in long drawn moans of infinite distress. Nothing was ever seen, but there was no delusion as to the sounds. It was no use putting a new servant, ignorant of the facts, to sleep there; midnight was sure to make the secret known. Those moans, as of a soul in pain, so it was steadily affirmed, proceeded from no human visitant. The room was haunted and it was not to be expected that any one would sleep in company with a ghost.

My friend, the mistress of the house, was a woman of great nerve and common sense. She needed the room for household use and she resolved to try the ghost. Accordingly she had it made ready for occupation and after a careful examination of everything in the apartment prepared to spend the night in it herself. The tales were quite true. Toward midnight, when all was still, the ghostly music began to quiver through the silence, sweet and wild and exquisitely sad. My friend listened, not quite guiltless perhaps of tremors. Then she rose and examined the room carefully at length. Presently it struck her that the sounds proceeded from one corner of the room. She shifted the rug, put her ear down and found it to be the case. She had located the ghost, if it was not laid. Next morning a carpenter was sent for, the boards were taken up and immediately beneath there was revealed a perfect maze of bell wires, which had been conducted by this route to the different parts of the house. When doors and windows were all closed and everything still at night, the wind, finding its way by what channel it could, turned this labyrinth of wires into an æolian harp, whence issued the mysterious sounds by which successive households had been scared. The wires were adjusted, the chiming and quivering ceased, the ghost was laid and the haunted room has been comfortably occupied ever since.

Writes Letters to Himself.

John Beckwith, the warehouseman, received a letter the other day addressed in a round business hand and bearing the Oakland postmark. He glanced at it, rubbed his forehead reflectively a moment and then, without opening the envelope, tore it into bits. "Why did you do that?" asked his partner. "That might have contained something of importance."

"No, it didn't. I wrote it myself." "Are you in the habit of writing letters to yourself?" "Yes, I have to. Now, if I hadn't written that yesterday and mailed it I would have forgotten that bunch of brail, two dozen pearl buttons and five yards of haircloth that I have got to go down town and buy right now. Once, though, I wrote a letter to myself about something I wanted to remember and forgot to mail it for two weeks.—San Francisco Post.

His Good Reason.

Patient—I want to take gas. Dentist—It is not usual to administer gas for such a small tooth, my boy. It won't hurt you for an instant. "You've got to give me gas, or I won't have it out."

"You shouldn't be so afraid of being hurt. Now, sit up there like a little man."

"I ain't afraid of being hurt, but I expect I shall screech when it comes out."

"That won't matter."

"Yes, it will. All the boys I ever licked are waiting outside to hear me boiler."—Exchange.

How to Get Found in Boston.

A stranger has no excuse for being lost in Boston, although our streets are a trifle crooked. If the visitor who has lost his bearings will only strike out at random, he will soon find himself on Boston Common. It's a sure rule.—Boston Record.

Diffused Light.

The superiority of diffused light over that which is direct is now generally insisted upon by scientific experts, the fact being urged that, while the latter wearies the eyes and predisposes to shortsightedness, the former is, like sunlight, soft and soothing. The principle involved in lighting a room by this method is certainly sufficiently simple and practicable for its general adoption, consisting, that is, in having reflected upon the ceilings and walls the required luminous rays, which thus fall softly on the desk or worktable. All that is necessary to secure this result is to place a reflector not above the source of light, but below it, by which arrangement all the rays are reflected toward the ceiling. In some of the public assembly places and institutions of France unique methods are resorted to in carrying out this plan, as at the school of St. Cyr, where a conical reflector, painted entirely white, is placed under the arc lights, while at the Lyceum in Aix a parabolic reflector is used, which is bronzed on the lower and silvered on the upper part. A great light is thus obtained, far more than if direct.

Excusable Jealousy.

"It fills me with envy," remarked the man who wants an appointment, "to see the schoolboy trudging to his studies."

"You long for the pastimes of youth?"

"No. I don't care for them. But I'd like to be able to pass a civil service examination as well as he could."—Washington Star.

Large toques of velvet seem to be the dominant idea in millinery, and they are trimmed with upright feathers on one side or a long plume falling partly on the hair at the side, with two short, fluffy plumes standing up. Flowers and bows of ribbon are also used, and they all tilt up on the left side.

His Authority.

Daniel Webster's oratory was not at all ways of the ponderous order. Occasionally he would introduce a bit of humor very effectively, an instance of which The Green Bag gives as follows:

Daniel Webster when in full practice was employed to defend the will of Roger Perkins of Hopkinton. A physician made affidavit that the testator was struck with death when he signed the will. Webster subjected his testimony to a most thorough examination, showing by quoting medical authorities that doctors disagree as to the precise moment when a dying man is struck with death, some affirming that it is at the commencement of the disease, others at its climax and others still affirm that we begin to die as soon as we are born. "I should like to know," said the opposing counsel, "what doctor maintains that theory?"

"Dr. Watts," said Mr. Webster, with great dignity. "The moment we begin to live we all begin to die."

Irish in the Sixteenth Century.

They live in huts made of straw. The men are all large bodied, and of handsome features and limbs, and as active as the roe deer. They do not eat often than once a day, and that is at night, and that which they usually eat is butter with oatmeal bread. They drink sour milk, for they have no other drink; they don't drink water, although it is the best in the world. On feast days they eat some flesh half cooked, without bread or salt, as that is their custom. They clothe themselves, according to their habit, with tight trousers and short, loose coats of very coarse goat's hair. They cover themselves with blankets and wear their hair down to their eyes. They are great workers and laured to toil. The most of the women are very beautiful, but badly got up. They do not wear more than a chemise and a blanket, with which they cover themselves, and a linen cloth, much folded, over the head and tied in front. They are great workers and housekeepers, after their fashion.—From "Captain Quellar's Adventures in Connacht and Ulster."

A Story of Thackeray.

Dean Farrar gives the following reminiscence of Thackeray in The Independent: "Dining with him at the house of Dr. Butler, I remember that he spoke of many things, but the only remark that I specially recall was one about himself. He said that he had recently sat at a dinner next to an eminent tragedienne, now dead, and that she had overpowered him with ecstatic compliments. A few days afterward he had sat next Jenny Lind, and the great singer, with a frankness which delighted him, said that she had not read a line of one of his writings and knew nothing about them. Of the two ladies, he greatly preferred Jenny Lind and enjoyed her frank indifference much more than the fulsome adulation."

A BLOT ON DOUGLAS COUNTY'S FAIR NAME.

Adam Uber Lynched and His Body Riddled With Bullets.

The Genoa Courier sends out an extra announcing the lynching of Adam Uber, the slayer of Henry Anderson. A mob of twenty men visited the Court House at Genoa yesterday morning at about 2 o'clock and called to Sheriff Brockles that the Constable of Gardnerville was there with a prisoner and wanted admittance. The Sheriff was slow in responding and the doors leading through the Recorder's office to the hallway of the jail were smashed with a sledge hammer. Sheriff Brockles and Constable Gray, who were sleeping in the Sheriff's office, were overpowered and the keys to the jail secured and the helpless man dragged from his cell into the storm barefooted and half naked and marched a distance from the town. Uber's screams were silenced by a gag and the two shirts he wore were torn from his body. When the Boyd lane was reached he was told to pray, but was given little opportunity. He was strung up in the presence of the Sheriff and Constable, who had been forced by armed men to accompany them to the spot. After the helpless man had been jerked up he was shot eight or nine times. His naked body was left hanging to the tree until 8 o'clock yesterday morning, when the Coroner took it in charge. Three bullet holes were found in his back, one in each arm, one in the chin and he was shot in two or three other places.

The Courier says the citizens of Genoa denounce this deed of lawlessness as an outrage and a crime of the blackest kind, for the prisoner was in a fair way to receive a fair trial and a proper punishment for the crime he committed. Right minded people are grieved and incensed that the law was not allowed to take its course. The deed can only be compared to the work of fiends and would make a white cap or a blood-thirsty Apache ashamed of himself.

The Asylum Muddle.

At the last meeting of the Board of Asylum Commissioners a resolution was offered by Westerfield asking for the resignation of Dr. Dergstein Superintendent of the Asylum. It failed to pass.

One did pass, however, asking Dr. Bergstein why he discharged book-keeper Woods.

The Doctor replied as follows:
To the Honorable, the Board of Commissioners for the care of the Indigent Insane. Carson City, Nevada.

GENTLEMEN:—I am in receipt of a communication from the Secretary of your honorable body, containing the resolutions passed by you at a special meeting held at the State Capitol, December 1, 1897.

In answer I would say that I dismissed Mr. Woods from the Hospital for gross incompetency, neglect of duty, disobedience of and countermanding orders issued by me.

I shall be pleased in the future to submit to you all appointments made by me for your approval.

Very respectfully yours,
H. BERGSTEIN, Supt.

Should be Adjusted.

The Smith Valley colonists are just now in a devil of a fix. They cannot get possession of the property on account of some trouble between Cohn, Hofer and Wymore.—Yerington Rustler.

It is a matter of regret that colonization in Nevada should receive any kind of a setback by reason of any misunderstanding, and the parties at interest should see that these difficulties are adjusted as soon as possible.

The first Nevada colony should be made a success at any cost.

The story that the new colonists are having any trouble over the land title is denied by the owners of the ranches in this city.—Appeal.

Gennesy and Savage.

Watch for Gennesy & Savage's new ad. They are now located on Sierra street opposite the Truckee Stables and in the course of the week they will have their store arranged and their splendid stock of Eureka ranges, tin and agate ware, plumbing goods, and in fact everything in their line ready for inspection. They are receiving new goods and unpacking them every day. They will have many useful and pretty articles for Christmas presents. Plumbing is a specialty and they guarantee their work, and their prices are reasonable.

U. C. Girls Challenge U. N. Girls.

Yesterday the Nevada girls received a challenge from the first basket-ball team of Berkeley. It is understood that Dr. Stubbs is in favor of the challenge being accepted. The U. C. team has been practicing about a month, but the U. N. girls haven't played but very little, still there are some fine players among the latter and it is thought that a strong team can be sent down. It is thought the game will take place at Berkeley on some date near Christmas. If determination counts for anything, Nevada girls will probably come home with laurels. Boys, lookout.

Atmospheric Temperature.

The temperature of the atmosphere cools, on an average, about one degree for every 300 feet that we ascend or warms at the same rate as we descend. The mean temperature at the north pole is 0 and at the equator between 80 and 90 degrees. We can, therefore, get into a temperature one degree colder for every 70 or 80 miles that we travel north, and in a temperature one degree warmer for every 70 or 80 miles that we travel south.—Philadelphia Times.

Two ladies driving along the Bathurst (N. S. W.) road recently overtook a small boy trudging wearily along on bare feet. When given a "lift," it was found he had walked from Lawson to the valley (13 miles) to buy a loaf of bread, which was a penny cheaper there. Twenty-four miles to save a penny!

The Decay of Literary Taste.

Edmund William Gosse, who holds the position of translator to the British board of trade and is the "clerk lecturer" in English literature at Cambridge, in writing on the present decay of literary taste says: "The only hope for literature is that in spite of the indifference to—nay, the positive dislike of—careful writing on the part of the public, those who write, being themselves artists or artisans, shall continue to give to their productions this technical finish which alone invests it with dignity. It is only fair to say that in our own age there has been no lack of those who have honorably and unflinchingly turned out work: not slovenly, but as the public preferred, it was unpolished and in accordance with the laws and traditions of the art. But I am bound to confess that I see and I deeply deplore a relaxation of this noble zeal in some of our youngest craftsmen. I fear that something of the laxity of public taste has invaded their private workshops and that they are apt to say to themselves that second rate writing is 'good enough' for the publishers. Whenever I see it boldly put forth that 'the matter is everything and the manner' nothing, that to write with care is an 'affectation' or an 'artifice,' that style may take care of itself, and that 'uncharted freedom' is the best badge of a writer there seems to rise before me the lean and hungry scholar, scraping and cringing before the great vulgar patron, with 'What you wish, my lord. I don't presume to decide.' And from this sort of obsequi-ousness to public 'taste' no return to self respect is possible."

R. H. Hutton on Dickens.

The late Richard Holt Hutton, editor of the London Spectator, was a well known intellectual critic. The following were his criticisms on the genius of Charles Dickens: "The wealth and subtlety of his [Dickens'] contrasts, the fine aim of his exaggerations, the presence of mind (which is the soul of wit) displayed in his satire, the exquisitely professional character of the sentiments and metaphors which fall from his characters, the combined audacity and microscopic delicacy of his shading in narrative, the quaint flights of his fancy in illustrating a monstrous absurdity, the suddenness of his strokes at one moment, the cumulative perseverance of his touches at another, all make him such a humorist as many centuries are not likely to reproduce. But then humor of this kind is not necessarily connected with any deep knowledge of the heart and mind of man, and of such a knowledge I can see little trace in Dickens.
He had a memory which could retain and an imagination which could sublimate and a fancy which could indefinitely vary almost any trait which had once fixed itself in his mind, but the traits which did so fix themselves were almost always peculiarities, and his human figures are only real so far as they reproduce the real oddities of life, or what to a man in Dickens' rank and class seemed real oddities, and of course while there are many real oddities in the world these are not the staple of our average life, with which, indeed, Dickens' genius never dealt either."

Color Tints.

It is interesting to know the real meaning of the various color tints with which we are familiar today. The majority think the titles are bestowed haphazard, but it is not so. Each one is traceable to a well defined origin. For instance, mastic, the fashionable gray tan shade, is named after the mastic tree which grows in Greece, the gum of which it resembles in color. Blue black is in honor of the charcoal that comes from the vine stock. India ink is made from burned camphor. Scarlet is iodine of mercury. Chinese white is zinc. Turkey red is made from the madder plant that thrives in Hindustan. For Indian yellow we are indebted to the camel, and for sepia to the cuttlefish. The latter is an inky fluid the fish discharges when attacked in order to make the water opaque. The vivid crimsons, carmines and reddish purples are all furnished by the cochineal insects. The beautiful prussian blue is achieved by fusing horses' hoofs and other refuse animal matter in a strong solution of potassium carbonate. Vermilion is from the ore cinnabar, gamboge from the yellow sap of a tree in Siam. Bister is the soot of wood ashes, and raw sienna is the natural earth from the vicinity of Siena, Italy. Umber is also an earth found close by Umbria.—Table Talk.

A Chinese Secret Society.

The Chinese secret society the Kolao-Hui, which is answerable for so much of the antiforeign agitation, exercises a perfect terrorism over its members. One of the rioters at Wusung was tortured to try to extract the names of the ringleaders belonging to the society, but nothing could be wrung from him.
"My life," he said to his judges, "is forfeited in any case. If I tell you the names the Ko-laos will kill me and the whole of my family and wipe my name off the face of the earth. If I remain firm, you will kill me, but the Ko-laos will take care of my family."

These terrible organizations recruit members in a very unscrupulous fashion. One way is for a man to go round the various kitchens selling cooking utensils and telling each purchaser that he need not pay till he has proved the wares—perhaps not for a year, only he must sign the peddler's book.

The next day the peddler calls again and shows the unlucky cook that he has signed the membership roll of a secret society and henceforth must consider himself at its service.

Spider Crab Salad.

"Spider crabs are not eaten here," said Dr. Bean of the New York aquarium, "but I have eaten them often in Alaska. They grow there to a great size, with claws that would stretch over a bushel measure. Only the meat found in the claws is eaten, but that makes a delicious salad."—New York Sun.

Religion Versus Politics.

Clerk—Man wants transportation to Chicago.
Railroad Official—Confounded cler-gyman, I suppose. Well, I hate to do it, but you may sell him a ticket at half fare.
Clerk (a minute later)—Man says he's not a clergyman. He's a member of the legislature.
Railroad Official—Ah! Tell him we take pleasure in handing him a free pass.—Brooklyn Life.

FORMER DUELS.

Some of the Famous Affairs of Honor of the Past.

General Benedict Arnold fought a duel near Kilburn Wells in 1781 with Lord Landerdale, who, after Arnold missed him, refused either to fire or to apologize, saying that if the general was not satisfied he could keep on firing until he was. In 1804 the turbulent Lord Camelford, the symmetrical arrangement of whose whips and sticks over his chimneypiece is described by Byron, "From the thick bludgeon to the taper switch," lost his life in a duel he owed to a vengeance do femme.
Captain Best had caught a sharper named Symonds in the act of cheating and kicked his face to a pulp. The man's wife wrote Camelford an anonymous letter to tell him his friend Best had slundered him. A duel was fought with pistols (they were the two best shots in England), and Camelford fell with a mortal wound. "You have killed me, Best," said the dying man, "but the fault is wholly mine. I relieve you of all the blame." But men of mature years and established reputation risked life as recklessly as the wildest young guardsmen or London rakes.

Charles James Fox fought a duel with a cabinet minister, Mr. Adam, in 1779.
Four shots were exchanged. Adam missed. Fox fired in the air and apologized. "Sir," said Adam, "you have behaved like a man of honor." In India, toward the end of the last century, a duel was fought between Warren Hastings and Sir Philip Francis, the latter being dangerously wounded. Shortly afterward, and in the duel Macartney and Mr. Sadler quarreled at the council board, and in the duel Macartney received a dangerous wound. The Earl of Talbot and John Wilkes, fighting a duel at night in the garden of the Red Lion inn, at Bagshot, and discussing the conditions of it beforehand in a private room over a chop, is a tableau de mœurs.

George Canning was seriously wounded when he and Castlereagh met at Pa-tney in 1807 to exchange four shots. In the duel between Henry Grattan and Mr. Conry a bullet shattered the latter's arm. As late as 1835 Mr. Roebuck fought a duel with Mr. Black of The Morning Chronicle, when two shots were exchanged without result. The fighting parson was then as well known as the fighting editor. The Rev. Henry Bate, editor of The Morning Post, was both. A dead shot, and with what his contemporaries call "a profligate tongue," he was most successful as a duelist. He "pinked" "Fighting Fitzgerald," a Mr. Temple, a young barrister who was his assistant editor, and several others, but met his match at last in Captain Stoney Robinson, who gave him a severe wound, but whom he also wounded.—Cornhill Magazine.

The Number Thirteen.

The superstition that 13 is unlucky, which is traced back to a sacred source, meets with as many contradictions as confirmations. The fact that the horrible fire in the Paris bazaar started at booth 13 was telegraphed all around the world, whereas little notice is attracted by Nansen's success with 13 men. At one time 2 was a dreaded number in England, owing to the dynastic disasters to all monarchs second of their name from Eulhelred II to George II.
Yet Napoleon's number through all his life was 2, and who could wish for better luck than came to Goody Two Shoes or than that which results at times from having two strings to your bow?

Three, which since the days of Py-thagoras has been the divine number, shows that it is not invariably fortunate, for, though the fates are three, so also are the furies. The graces are three, but so also are the judges in hades and the heads of Cerberus. Then there are the records of three disloyal tribes in Welsh history; there are the three robbers in Orion's belt; there were the three tyrants at Athens, and 3 in mythology is as unlucky as it is divine. Just so clearly as it has been shown in time that the unlucky 2 can be lucky and that the pleasant 3 can be unpleasant the followers of the late Captain Fowler would show that the unlucky 13 can be the luckiest number there is. So we may as well regret his departure, while we wish success to his associates.—Boston Journal.
